Another year has come and gone. It's been a great year for the Landmark Society. Thanks to some very generous donors, we had enough money to have the Crook Farm farmhouse painted a nice cream color. It had been awhile since the house had been painted and it is now a much more 'historically accurate' color.

And before the painting took place, the siding on the summer kitchen was replaced with a more appropriate material (see photo below).

The boards on the front of the barn were replaced, and a new drainage ditch in front of the barn was dug, PVC drain pipe laid, and refilled. Now the ground in front of the barn is nice and dry and well drained.

The Tuna Valley "Ya Gotta Regatta" was held in May and will once again be held in 2017 on May

The school program was very successful – we hosted 538 fourth and fifth grade students from nine local schools. Registration for the 2017 school program (our 38th year!) has already begun!

The July 3rd saw our first Patriotic Music Festival at the Crook Farm featuring great patriotic and popular music by the Twin Tiers Community Band. We provided chairs under the tent and many brought their own blankets and chairs, sitting under the big tree and enjoying the music and the ice cream! Best of all, admission was free! We will definitely hold this popular event again next July.

The Creative Women's Workshop was held again on July 30th as nearly 100 women congregated at the Crook Farm to learn calligraphy, quilting, tating, knitting, cross stitch, tie dying, woodburning, horseshoes, juggling, sushi, terrariums, pencil drawing, birdhouses, candle making, blacksmithing, and basket making. This year's class will be held on July 29th. Mark your calendar!

The Crook Farm Country Fair and Old Time Music Festival was a success as well, with great weather, great food, and great crafts. This was our 38th annual fair.

And finally, our annual Crook Farm Volunteer dinner was held November 2 at the First Presbyterian Church, gathering together all our volunteers (counting every one, its nearly 100!) for a delicious meal, courtesy of our Board of Directors.

2016 at the Crook Farm

New siding on the barn at the Crook Farm and new big sliding barn doors which had actually been in storage for several years, were installed in the summer.

Opened, Closed, Moved, or Demolished in 2016

Every year, the Landmark keeps track of businesses and stores that have opened for business, were torn down, moved to a new location, or sadly closed in the past year. Some have been in Bradford for years; some were only in business for a few months. No matter what the reason, they all made history. Here are the names of those that we noted in the past year and the month associated with the event. If there are any that we missed (or got the date wrong), we apologize..

Toys of the Year, 2016.

Each year, the Landmark reports on the newly elected “Toys of the Year.” Chose by The National Toy Hall of Fame in 1998, the organization recognizes toys that have inspired creative play and enjoyed popularity over a sustained period. Final selections are made on the advice of historians, educators, and other individuals who exemplify learning, creativity, and discovery through their lives and careers. Toys are celebrated year-round in a state-of-the-art exhibit at The Strong museum in Rochester, New York.

The Swing, Dungeons & Dragons, and Fisher Price Little People

One toy takes its riders to new heights, and the other two let the imagination soar. The simple, ancient swing; game-changing Dungeons & Dragons; and the colorful, creative Fisher-Price Little People today became the 2016 inductees to The Strong’s National Toy Hall of Fame. The honorees were selected from a field of 12 finalists that also included: bubble wrap, Care Bears, Clue, coloring book, Nerf, pinball, Rock ‘Em Sock ‘Em Robots, Transformers, and Uno.

The Swing. Ancient cave drawings in Europe, carved figures from Crete, and ceramic vases from early Greece document instances of humans on swings. In the 1700s, artists of French nobility depicted swinging as an amusement of high-born adults. By the 19th century, industrial processes made ropes and metal chains cheaply and in abundance. And almost anyone with a tree could fashion a swing for children playing in the yards of growing towns and cities. The playground movement of the early 1900s put swings in public spaces for children of nearby apartment buildings and tenements. The parks and playgrounds gave youngsters healthy places to grow and socialize in cities that were becoming increasingly hostile to play. In the mid-20th century, many Americans put freestanding, family-sized swing sets on their own sunny suburban lots.

“Swinging requires physical exertion, muscle coordination, and a rudimentary instinct for, if not understanding of, kinetic energy, inertia, and gravity. It’s the perfect vehicle for outdoor play.”

Dungeons & Dragons. In Dungeons & Dragons, players assume the roles of characters that inhabit a world moderated and narrated by a Dungeon Master, a player who explains the action to others and solicits their reactions to the unfolding story. The Dungeon Master’s storytelling skills and the players’ abilities to imagine add enjoyment to the game. Some aspects of the play are familiar, such as dice, but the special dice for Dungeons & Dragons hold up to 20 sides. Rolling them determines each character’s individual strengths, plots their complex interactions, and decides the outcome of their encounters.

Fisher Price Little People. Fisher-Price first offered its Little People in a 1959 Safety School Bus pull toy. These stylized figures populated a variety of play sets that encouraged youngsters to explore the world beyond their homes and to imagine themselves at school or the airport, at the service station or the amusement park, and at the zoo or a faraway farm. Fisher-Price made the first Little People of wood and lithographed paper; solid, single-colored wooden bodies followed. Later figures were made of hard plastic.

More than two billion Little People have been sold since 1959, and they have helped generations of small children imagine big adventures in play sets representing farms, schools, airports, and other fascinating places in their worlds.

Another Historic Building Gone

The Terminal Building at the corner of Chautauqua Place and South Avenue was demolished during the spring and summer months. Adjoining buildings on each side were razed as well.

The buildings were deemed to be in very poor condition and not fiscally renovation able.

This photo shows the Terminal building at its peak, in 1934. The future of this now large empty lot is unknown at the present time.
